Give Them a Chance!

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air passages, but the thousand of little tubes and cavities leading to them. When these are clogged and choked with mucus, which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well. Cough, cold, croup, pneumonia, asthma, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is but one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at a reasonable price. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon it.

PRIME MOVERS.

Their Importance as Substitutes for Unintelligent Manual Labor.

The introduction of prime movers as a means of substituting for unintelligent manual labor is in itself a great aid to civilization and to the raising of humanity by rendering it very difficult, if not impossible, for a human being to obtain a livelihood by unintelligent work—the work of the horse in the mill or the turnip.

But there are prime movers and prime movers—those of small dimensions and employed for purposes where animal power or human power might be substituted, and those which attain ends that by no conceivable possibility could be attained at all by the exertion of muscular power.

Compare a galley, a vessel propelled by oars, with the modern Atlantic liner, and first let us assume that prime movers are non-existent and that this vessel is to be propelled galley fashion.

Take her length as some 600 ft., and assume that place be found for as many as 400 oars on each side, each oar worked by three men, or 2,400 men; and allow that six men under these conditions could develop work equal to one horse power; we should have 400 horse power. Double the number of men and we should have 800 horse power, with 4,800 men at work, and at least the same number in reserve, if the journey is to be carried on continuously.

Contrast the penny rail that obtained with the 19,500 horse power given forth by a large prime mover of the present day, such a power requiring, on the above mode of calculation, 117,000 men at work and 117,000 in reserve; and these to be carried in a vessel 600 ft. in length. Even if it were possible to carry this number of men in such a vessel, by no conceivable means could their power be utilized so as to impart to it a speed of 20 knots.

This illustrates how a prime mover may not only be a mere substitute for muscular work, but may afford the means of attaining an end that could not be by any possibility be attained by muscular exertion, no matter what money was expended or what galley slave suffering was inflicted.

Take again the case of a railway locomotive. From 400 to 600 horse power developed in an implement, which, even including its tender, does not occupy an area of more than 50 square yards, and draws us at 60 miles an hour. Here again the prime mover succeeds in doing what which no expenditure of money or of life could enable us to obtain from muscular effort.

To what, and to whom, are these meritorious prime movers due? I answer to the application of science—and to the labors of the civil engineer, using that term in its full and proper sense as embracing all engineering other than military.—Sir Frederick Bramwell.

OPINIONS ABOUT INSECTS.

Some of Them Superstitious, and All of Them Interesting.

The Koran says all flies shall perish save one, the bee fly.

It is regarded as a death warning in Germany to hear a cricket's cry. The Tapania Indians in South America say the devil assumes the form of a fly. Rain is, in some parts of our own country, expected to follow unusually loud chirping of crickets.

Flies are sometimes regarded as furnishing prognostications in the weather, and even of other events.

Spaniards, in the sixteenth century, believed that spiders indicated gold, where they were found in abundance.

Although a sacred insect among the Egyptians, the beetle receives but little notice in folk lore. It is unlucky in England to kill one.

In Germany it is said to indicate good luck to have a spider spring his web downwards towards you, but bad luck when he rises towards you.

The grasshopper is a sufficiently unwelcome visitor of himself in this country, but in Germany his presence is further said to announce strange guests.

A Welsh tradition says bees came from Paradise, leaving the garden when man fell, but with God's blessing, so that was necessary in the celebration of the mass.

The ancients generally maintained that there was a close connection between bees and the soul. Porphyry speaks of "those souls which the ancients called bees."

It is said that upon the back of the seven year locust there sometimes appear marks like a letter of the alphabet. When this looks like a W it is thought that war is imminent.

German tribes regard salt beetles as diabolic, and all beetles are detested in Ireland, more especially a bronze variety known as "goldie." It is also believed that to see a beetle will bring on a rain-storm the next day.

There are said to be no spiders in Ireland, nor will spiders spin their web in an Irish oak nor on a cedar tree. A spider is said to have saved Mohammed from his pursuers by spinning its web across a cave where he sought refuge. The same is said of David in the Cave of Adullam.

A Short-Sighted Young Man. He—"I must break off my engagement, Violet."

She—"Why should you do that?" He—"Well, your father has failed; how can he support a son-in-law in the style in which I have lived?"

She—"Why, from goose, he failed on purpose to meet the extra expense." Harper's Bazar.

They Were the Wrong Size. "Those stockings are all wool, I presume," she said, as she requested the clerk to wrap her up a half dozen pairs.

"Oh, yes, miss," he answered in thoughtlessness, "they're all wool and a yard wide."

"Sir!" she exclaimed indignantly, and before he fully realized what he had said, she whisked out of the store.—Washington Critic.

Now It Strikes a Stranger. "What are you doing?" demanded a citizen of a countryman who was critically examining the former's electric bell-knob.

"Say, mister," replied the countryman, straightening up, "there's a subtle matter with your door-bell. The knob's got pulled clear into the hole."

Of New York.

An Open Case.

For a number of years the citizens of Modoc county have been severely afflicted in the person of their Superior Judge. It is needless at this time to enumerate the causes of complaint, or to mention efforts that have been made to cause his impeachment, to induce him to resign, or to get rid of him in any way. He has finally signified his willingness to resign, but that desirable object is liable to be defeated in a peculiar way. He has things absolutely in his own hands, and can vacate or stay, according to the dictates of his own sweet will. His only condition now seems to be, and he makes it a matter of pride and refuses to be let down in any other way, that he shall name the successor to Senator Patterson to be recommended to Governor Waterman. Dr. Patterson then inquired who his man was to be, and Judge Harris named F. W. Ewing. Undoubtedly the Democrat best fitted for the position. There is absolutely no reason why he should not be judge, except that he is a Democrat, and that will be a new reason even for Republicans to hear. He is an able lawyer, a good citizen and an honest man. He has health, energy and talent, and has conducted his business so as to make a healthy class of enemies. Finding that the alternative was Harris or Ewing, Dr. Patterson signified his intention to accept the situation, but said he could not answer for Governor Waterman. Judge Harris then said he would go to the Governor himself, and if he refused then no resignation would be forthcoming. Dr. Patterson has honestly stated his position to the voters of his county so they cannot misunderstand it. It seems, however, that even in an enlightened community like Modoc, where the ways of the small politician would hardly be expected to have reached, there are some who are inclined to make political capital out of even as square a proposition as this, and are accusing Dr. Patterson of "going back on his party," etc. If there is an office that should be above party it is that of Judge. If there is a case where a liberal spirit should prevail it is this one. If there is a man calculated to do good service on the bench it is Mr. Ewing. If there is a candidate who can afford to ignore such attacks it is Dr. Patterson.

The growth of the University in popular favor is almost phenomenal. President Brown has been wise in his direction of affairs, and that wisdom has been appreciated by the Regents, who have carried out the measures that have been proposed as far as the means at their command would permit.

The institution opened, under the new management, a little more than a year ago, with, including President Brown, three teachers. To that force was added two others this year. The adding of an instructor from the military, has been a cherished idea of President Brown. To effect this, national legislation had to be secured. It has been accomplished. Soon the students will have the advantages of practical instructions, which will add alike to their physical and mental culture. From the present outlook, the work of the several departments will assume a certain individuality of a successful whole.

The Experimental Station will be placed on a footing which will demand the expenditure of the appropriation of the Government for it, and it alone, as intended by the spirit and letter of the law creating it. It will be one of the State's pride to show Congress that she has accepted the bountiful provision made to maintain that important adjunct to the University.

The excellent showing that will be made to the next Legislature, will induce that body to make most liberal appropriations for that part of the University which belongs to the State, and which it is her duty to support.

NEW YORK.

Blaine Talks to the Irish-Americans.

Erin's Sons in Line for American Protection.

Madison Square Crowded to Overflowing—A Ringing Dispatch from Gen. Harrison.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The Irishmen turned out in full force to-night to attend the mass meeting of the Irish Protectionists at Madison Square Garden. The immense building was crowded to overflowing half an hour before the meeting was called to order, and the adjacent streets were thronged with people eager to get a glimpse of James G. Blaine, the attraction of the evening. There were 7,000 persons in the building at 8 o'clock, when Judge A. L. Morrison of Arizona read, on behalf of Chairman Patrick Ford, an address in which these passages occurred: "We are here to-night, not as Irishmen to consult for the interests of Irishmen, but as Americans to discuss American affairs with Americans ends in view. We are not a foreign element, as loose phraseology might imply. We refuse to regard ourselves. This land is our home, and in the present contest we see only the republic and are concerned only for her welfare. For us party lines are obliterated. We know only Americans and anti-Americans. A man who fights under the flag of English free trade, no matter of what race he may be, whether he knows it or not, is protecting one of the English enemy; and on the other hand, the man who fights under the flag of protection to American labor, whether native or foreign, that man we hail as a comrade, a brother and American."

A MESSAGE FROM GENERAL HARRISON.
Patrick Egan and David Healy spoke, and Mr. Blaine commenced after this message from General Harrison had been read: "I gratefully accept the congratulations of the Irish-American Protectionists now assembled in mass meeting at Madison Square Garden, and in return congratulate them upon the magnificent impulse their intelligent zeal has given to the cause of protection in this campaign."

MR. BLAINE'S SPEECH.
Mr. Blaine said: "Mr. Chairman: I speak to-night to men of Irish birth, but not in relation to their connection with the British Empire. I speak to them in relation to their citizenship to the great American Republic [applause], and of the duties they owe to the policies they should pursue, and I gather that the strongest lesson for the Irishman in America is to be found in his experience in his native land, the fairest and almost richest portion of all Europe, destined to poverty and suffering, and to the exile of millions of its children because of misgovernment, and destined primarily to utter financial ruin because her people were not allowed to adopt for her own use and her own advantage the principle of protection, for which all Irishmen should struggle in America. [Cheers.] So great is the Agricultural worth of Ireland, that only forty years ago she shipped a greater amount of produce across the Channel to England than the United States exported to all countries; greater than the empire of Russia sent to the other countries of Europe, and with all this

WHERE IS IRELAND TO-DAY?
She shares the fate of all countries purely agricultural. She shares the fate that would, in a free-trade degree, overtake us if the free-trader should have his way and reduce us to an agricultural people. [Applause.] And yet to-night, I fear that the majority of the Irish voters of America, or the Irish-American voters, will cast their votes on the 6th day of November as the present Government of England would decree them to cast it. [Cries of "No! no!"] I wish you could make that "no" a large majority of the Irish vote of the United States. For the last four months Democrats have been denying and Republicans affirming that the first and last and constant wish of England was that Cleveland's administration should be sustained by the whole force and effect of English opinion, and just when they had begun to make an impression upon the American people that such might not be the fact, we have

A LETTER OF THE BRITISH MINISTER TO WASHINGTON (groans) urging the re-election of Cleveland, and can never interpret that letter until you know the letter that called it forth. To get the whole gist and meaning of the correspondence you must have both sides of it, and this letter from the British Minister was called forth by a letter from California, written by a native of England. [Blaine then read the letter, in which the writer states to Mr. Sackville West that his faith had been shaken by President Cleveland's Administration]

and writes to the British Minister to dissolve his doubts.]
Mr. West says to the California man that the recent proceeding of the President is

ONLY A LITTLE BY-PLAY WHICH DOES NOT MEAN ANYTHING.
He need not be afraid and all other English voters can go ahead with perfect confidence. Three Ministers of the United States, resumed Blaine, and certainly two, have had their walking-papers for offenses less than that, and to-night if an American Minister at England should write to the English voter advising him to support either side as one favorable to the United States, he would be politely invited to sail home by the next steamer. And then

WHAT DOES THE SECRETARY OF STATE DO?
Why, he says it was no harm; it was only private. Well, suppose he sends a private circular; suppose he issues ten thousand of them and marks them private on the corner, and there came a discovery—I suppose Secretary Bayard would say, "Not a particle of harm done so long as you mark them private, and as long as you mark them private they will have so much more beneficial effect when they get into public print." And so this has done its perfect work; it was written for Grover Cleveland (groans); it was written in order to bring naturalized English voters to his support.

MR. CLEVELAND'S PREMIER.
At the head of the Cabinet says it is all right, and we are to have a British Minister at Washington giving his opinion as to what we should do in this country in our political and our domestic affairs. One remark he makes I wish to comment particularly on, for I call it an insult to the Republican party in saying that the rejection by a Republican Senate of an outrageous and miserable and dastardly fishery treaty was a mere political ruse for this campaign. He has no right to say so. There has never been a Senate in the history of this Republic, Democratic or Whig, or Republican or Federal that would for one moment have entertained that fishery treaty, and Lord Sackville West has no right to say to the American people that the Senatorial representatives of that great party, in looking after the national honor, are merely committing a political ruse. He will find that a political ruse of that kind will last as long as the honor of the American flag is to be preserved and the right of the hardy fishermen of America is to be protected. [Cheers.]

THE TARIFF QUESTION.
Passing to the tariff question Mr. Blaine said: "We are in the habit of discussing the tariff question very largely on the theory that you may philosophize on the decline of free trade and on the decline of protection to the end; and I want now to give you a solid fact. Up to this date, since Grover Cleveland was inaugurated, there has been imported into this country of iron and steel and other products an amount equal to the enormous sum of $160,000,000, and they say we have too high a tariff. If that iron and steel had been made here, it meant good wages for the whole year for 300,000 laborers [applause], and for the average size of a family dependent upon him it meant 1,500,000 persons to be fed and backs to be clothed out of that $160,000,000. [Applause.]

NO SURRENDER AT ENGLAND'S BIDDING.
That is what I call a solid fact. And they say there is not enough coming; yet they want to lower the tariff so that we can have more. I have the supreme confidence that on November 6, the American people will declare that they will not surrender at the bidding of England or at the bidding of the English Minister, or at the bidding of President Cleveland (groans) or all three combined. They will never surrender the great principle of protection to American industries. [Loud and continued applause.]

At San Diego yesterday, Gladstone lowered the world's half-mile trotting record. He finished the first and fifth heats in 48 1-2 seconds each time. Before, the best record was by Dollie Dimple at Los Angeles, in 49 1-2 seconds.

ON WALL STREET.

SOME OF THE QUEER CHARACTERS TO BE SEEN THERE.

Remarkable Career of Asbury Harpending, the Mighty Kentuckian—Henry Smith, the Man Who Threatened To Make Jay Gould Earn His Living with a Hand Organ and a Monkey. New a Frequenter of the Free Lunch Counter—Broker Heath's Downfall and Death—An ex-Railroad President Making Turns in the Bucket Shop—"Honest John Pondir," and His Unmatchable Homeliness and Smart Speculating Sense.

(Copyright 1898.)

New York is full of queer characters and Wall street is a magnet that attracts many. Taking a few of them at random, there is Asbury Harpending of the Consolidated Exchange. He is a Kentuckian by birth, about 45 years of age, has piercing black eyes, a full long black beard, is of slender build and over six feet in height. He became notorious in San Francisco when only 20 years of age. It was during the Civil War. He was full of boyish enthusiasm for the Confederacy and was arrested in San Francisco on a charge of plotting to capture, with the aid of a number of others, the treasure ships leaving that port for Panama and then to escape to England and use the proceeds for the furtherance of the Southern cause. The authorities arrested him as the chief conspirator in this piratical enterprise, and he was convicted and imprisoned; subsequently, however, he was pardoned. He then embarked in real estate ventures with the famous Ralston, of San Francisco, who drowned himself on the downfall of the Bank of California. Then Harpending built a block of buildings having a frontage of 300 feet on Market street, San Francisco. They took fire and he watched the fire with the greatest composure, comforted by the thought of the ample insurance on the property. His agent proved, however, he neglected to insure it, and as a result he went up in the smoke and flames a burnt offering to the speculative gods. He came to New York eight years ago, plunged into mining enterprises, promoted the development of some South American mines, got in low in the last mining boom and was very successful, especially in the Comstock shares. For instance, he held considerable Consolidated Virginia, for which he paid about $2, and which he sold at between $40 and $50, making it is understood, nearly $750,000. He has had a career full of strange vicissitudes, has made and lost several fortunes, and strange as it may sound, has landed on his feet and is worth a million or more. He is a man of indomitable resolution, full of fight, undaunted under all circumstances, a stormy petrel of speculation who has rested at last on a sunlit peak.

He has speculated in railroad stocks, mining shares or grain all his life, and is one of a million who has not been permanently overcome by the fatal undertow which threatens big and little on the speculative sea. He has had the cramp a number of times, but his fiery Southern blood has warmed him up to a successful struggle against the adverse current. Walking up and down in a broker's office and breathing out his anger against some offender who seemed lost in executing an order he offered, he presented a queer spectacle. Sometimes Chicago broke, and he rather slow in reporting a transaction, and then the would-be buccaneer of the Golden Horn would break into threats suggestive of Col. Bowie: "I'll knife 'em, the d—d scoundrels. I'll knife 'em."

Henry Smith, the former millionaire, and once a big operator in stocks but now a devotee of free lunch counters, may be put down as one of the queer Wall street characters. He fought Jay Gould in numberless speculations. Once he said: "I'll make Jay Gould earn his living with a hand organ and a monkey."

The remark was repeated to Mr. Gould. He smiled grimly and replied: "When Henry Smith failed for $5,000,000, Mr. Gould remarked: 'He might now try the hand organ himself.' Smith had been engaged with Addison Cammack and Baron Woerlshoffer in a bear campaign, but his two associates had found it prudent to cover their short sales. Smith overplayed his market as most operators do sooner or later, and was crushed by the triumphant car of the bulls. Jay Gould was the driver and he contemplated the mangled remains of 'Hen' Smith with philosophical serenity. Smith had few friends and no one sympathized with him in his misfortunes. In fact, his failure was celebrated by the manager of one large house with an abundance of cigars for everybody in the establishment. He is short and slight, small in body and small in mind, pure proud and snobbish in the days when he was worth $5,000,000 or $6,000,000, and hated even then. To-day he wanders like a forlorn ghost in the region of Wall street, looked upon with contempt by those who know that he pulled down poor William Heath, his broker, and that he has a soul about the dimensions of a pin head.

William Heath may be remembered by some. He was "Hen" Smith's broker in his last great speculation, and was sent to Ludlow Street Jail for some alleged irregularities growing out of his financial transactions, and which led to civil suits. He died in Ludlow Street Jail a pauper while his rich wife was leading a gay life in Paris, a woman who deliberately left her husband to die poor and comparatively friendless. A more disgusting exhibition of fashionable heartlessness has seldom been presented in real life. Heath was a man of ability, a gentleman in manner and education, and for years was very successful.

John Tobin, once President of the Hudson River Railroad and now about 70 years of age, is tall, stoop-shouldered, sharp-featured, and has keen, rat-like eyes. He was once worth two millions but is now said to be speculating in the bucket shop. He was in the heyday of his fortunes at the beginning of the civil war and before the Hudson River road was merged with the New York Central. It was a time of wild speculations in gold and stocks and everything else. The gambling mania broke out everywhere. Tobin, it is said, dropped a good deal of money with John Morrissey, the keeper of gambling resorts here and in Saratoga. One night, it is said, Tobin lost a large sum and gave Morrissey a check but stopped it the next day. Morrissey complained to old Commodore Vanderbilt, who, it is said, turned against Tobin on this account, and ultimately had him ousted as President of the Hudson River road. Here is a dramatic tragedy. A man worth $2,000,000 now making $3 turns in the bucket shop. It is the old story of unsuccessful speculation.

Bank presidents say that 75 per cent. of the men who go into business sooner or later fail. If this is true of legitimate industry how much chance can the average speculator have?

Another notable figure of gone days who still stalks like a ghost to slow minds through Wall street is John Pondir, famous as the homeliest man in that region and proud of the fact. With his phenomenal fog horn mouth, greenish-gray eyes, mangy-looking, brick-colored side-whiskers, astonishing nose, hands and feet and skin of pale rhinoceros color, and about as rough as a water hog's when, in short, his matchless physical ugliness is made the subject of encomiums by his many warm friends, John Pondir's chest swells with pride as he reflects that if he hasn't reached physical distinction at the zenith he has reached it at the nadir and is in perfection in his own peculiar way.

He is once worth $1,000,000 and was identified as a director with several large corporations. Now he seems to be in very moderate circumstances. He is just as good-hearted as he is homely and is, therefore, not without friends. He is a man of some cultivation and a connoisseur in pictures, precious stones and wines. He once walked past the guard unchallenged into the presence of Secretary Stanton and sold him 120,000 stand of arms at a splendid profit. He was wholly unknown to Mr. Stanton, but gave that statesman his assurance that he was "Honest John Pondir" and that his word was better than his bond. His great pride in life is his son Rufus Hatch Pondir, who is a newspaper publisher and worked his shrewd father in some petty transaction the elder Hebrew remarked proudly to a friend: "Ah, dat boy Rufus, he is a good one. He does my heart good. He will get along all right in Wall street."

Oscar Willoughby Riggs.

WOMEN AS TELEGRAPH OPERATORS.

They Are Bright, Reliable, and a Good Many of Them as Able as Men.

There isn't a busier spot in all New York than the operating room of the Western Union Telegraph Company. It happened in there a few days ago to inquire about press messages that had gone astray. Manager Dealy "called up" a distant city to make the inquiry for me, and while waiting for the reply we fell to talking of the 500 operators in the big room. One third were women. There wasn't a rush of business, and so the operators had little to do. Some of the women were handsome. All were tastefully dressed. The majority looked rosy and healthy. They all wore a jaunty air, as well as fashionably cut gowns. Some were busy sending or receiving messages. Those who hadn't any messages to send were reading books or papers. Some were engaged in fancy work or knitting. It was a great big happy family, and an occasional ring of a woman's musical voice was heard above the Niagara of clicks.

"Is the telegraph business a good one for women to engage in?" I asked him. "Yes," was Mr. Dealy's reply. "A woman who is smart and quick and wants to earn her own living can do so very comfortably if she be a good operator."

"Does the supply equal the demand?" "Yes, a dozen times over, but good smart women are always wanted. We receive a great many applications from women who want work. They come from all parts of the country and are carefully tried away. As soon as a vacancy occurs we take the first application on file and give whoever happens to be that lucky heroine the first chance. We have applications on file now from women received full one year and a half ago."

"What time is necessary to prepare a woman to operate on a telegraph?" "A word woman can learn much faster than a man who isn't quick and ambitious. Much depends upon their previous education. Women well versed in a variety of subjects, who can read difficult manuscripts, who can spell correctly, who can supply deficiencies in messages on a word woman who are smart can become good operators in a year. Others require from one to three years to become first class operators. Women are often more reliable than men, and we have some who are quite as expert as their brothers of the key. How are women paid? Beginners are paid $10 a month. If they can operate fairly well their pay is increased to $25 per month. Then as they improve they are still further advanced until they reach the average pay—from $50 to $75 per month, according to experience and ability. Women operators work nine hours a day, usually from 9 a. m. to 5.30 p. m., with a half hour, minimum, for lunch. They are shown no more favors than the men. They are required to keep their wires clear of messages. When they are not engaged they may either read or sew, paint, do fancy work or whatever else they choose. Yes, we have a good deal of talent here. Any number of our operators can even make their regular labor is finished. Two write for the newspapers. Others sing in church choirs. A few give lessons in music, and one teaches a dancing class in the evening. One of our best operators is Mrs. W. E. Randolph. She is a widow and sings in Plymouth Church choir. She is also a very clever verse writer and a poem she wrote at the time of Henry Ward Beecher's death attracted a good deal of attention. She has been operator for many years and is a good one, too.

"My long experience has taught me that in many respects women operators are better workers than men, but altogether not so much money after their regular work is finished. Two write for the newspapers. Others sing in church choirs. A few give lessons in music, and one teaches a dancing class in the evening. One of our best operators is Mrs. W. E. Randolph. She is a widow and sings in Plymouth Church choir. She is also a very clever verse writer and a poem she wrote at the time of Henry Ward Beecher's death attracted a good deal of attention. She has been operator for many years and is a good one, too.

THE PLATFORM.

The Republicans of Washoe, proud of the past and hopeful for the future, heartily endorse the platform and nominees of the National Republican Convention, as adopted at Chicago, and the Republican State Convention at Winnemucca, and pledge a routing majority for Harrison and Morton and Protection, and Murphy and Barine and the ticket nominated by this Convention. We demand legislation from both Government and State in regard to irrigation, and for the improvement of our natural waterways, as well as for the storage of water, whereby the natural advantages of this section can be brought to their fullest capacity. We demand the most rigid economy in State and County affairs, and the establishment of the State's expenses upon such a basis as will secure good government at the lowest rate of taxation. We maintain that a rate of seventy-five cents should be and is sufficient to provide revenue for the State Government. In view of the rejection of the new Chinese treaty by the Mongolian Government we demand the total and absolute exclusion of all Chinese, and they must go.
